

ABSTRACT

In a method of creating an electronic document that is linked to another electronic document, a view of a selected electronic document is displayed on a graphical user interface. While the view of the selected electronic document is being displayed, a predetermined user input to create a new electronic document is received. The new electronic document is created in response to receiving the predetermined user input, wherein the selected electronic document and the new electronic document are linked to each other.

60195403.doc